Santa Cruz poet Morton Marcus lived a life 'devoted to excellence'

Full story: Santa Cruz Sentinel

Morton Marcus, one of Santa Cruz's most prominent literary figures, died Wednesday at his home in Santa Cruz after a long battle with renal cancer.

An extraordinary man to be sure, a man of many gifts and blessings. One of his great blessings was to have a family that was and is totally devoted him. Please note, he is survived by more than you listed above. He is also survived by his son Nick Galli, his grandson Zachary Marcus Ramshur, Hls daughter in law- Amy Scott and his son in law, Steve Ramshur. Thank you again.

It was a great pleasure to know him and to have shared many moments with him. He had a generous spirit and an open-heart that cannot be equaled. I owe my introduction to literature to him and wish him well now wherever he goes. He always supported literature and had a huge family of writers. Many of us are like his spiritual children of literature. He certainly touched my soul in a wonderful and positive way. Thanks, Mort. Mark Taylor

"A heart is not judged by how much you love; but by how much you are loved by others."
The others are a family that Morton Marcus kept very close and a community that will deeply feel the loss of his presence.
He will continue to give to us in the legacy of his words, the students he nurtured, and his children, to whom he bequeathed his enormous talent and who, in turn, have blessed the world with their artistry.
(The quote is from "The Wizard of Oz," which Morton Marcus's very gifted daughter, Jana, photographed for Cabrillo Stage this summer.)

In the '70s I took Mort's UC Ext classes when he was bringing in all the writers and poets. It was a life-changing experience for me. He taught me what makes poetry real, and what makes life real. I cherish all the books and the memories. My sympathies to his family. I wish he could have lived longer, to continue sharing himself with all of us.

My condolences to his family and friends. I enjoyed seeing his film reviews on local TV. He will be missed.

I had Morton for English at Cabrillo College...with all due respect, he was probably one of the most arrogant, haughty individuals I've ever met. I would rather have spent time with my dentist than during his office hours.
However, my condolences.

I enjoyed his class on the history of science fiction movies quite a bit when I took it in 1985 at Cabrillo. Mort was cool, and he will be missed.

Comments like this only prove that you cannot make everybody happy. Better to keep it to yourself. You have your opinion. Frankly, nobody else wants to hear it. Maybe that's why you're complaining in this forum. I would be happy if only one person complained about me after I die.

I am the other Morton J. Marcus, born in NYC in 1938, an economist living in Indianapolis. Sometimes Mort and I were confused by people searching for one of us. There was no reason for that confusion. I am an economist who enjoys a statewide reputation that will vanish quickly. Mort was a poet of boundless and timeless reputation. We never met, but we did have one delightful telephone conversation to compare experiences.
